Dedication

It is traditional to dedicate each book project to one person or to a small group of people who are explicitly named. I have chosen instead to thank many folks – many who don't realize that I'm doing what I'm doing because of them.

I've been blessed through the years with a wealth of friends who've shaped me in ways that I cannot explain. The debt that I owe to everyone that I've ever called friend cannot be repaid. Though I can't list the name of everyone whom I've called friend, I can tell you that you're all in my heart and my mind. I look forward to the times yet to come and cherish the time we've spent together.

Acknowledgements

If you're reading this it's likely you've read other acknowledgements where the author says that writing a book is never a solitary process. It's never the expression of the author's will upon the universe. Never has that been as true as with the project. I've leaned on more people than I can count in order to get this project.

First, I have to thank Brian Proffitt, my fellow author and friend who has challenged me to create a book that is accessible to everyone. Brian and I had several detailed conversations about the project where he helped to hone my thinking about what this project was.

Second, I must thank Joe Mack who did the technical editing of the manuscript. Although any remaining errors in the manuscript are mine, there are many of my errors that you won't see because of Joe's attention to detail.

Finally, I have to acknowledge the fact that I'm surrounded by a great group of people. I sometimes tell clients I feel like I play "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?" everyday. The only exception is that I don't get multiple choice questions and I have a seemingly limitless "Phone a Friend" lifeline. My fellow MVPs and respected members of the SharePoint community who are now accustomed to my instant messages and emails know that they've bailed me out when I didn't know an answer with regularity.
